Latest M.U.C. Plan seriously flawed

M.U.C.'s Urban Development Plan May Increase Municipal Taxes: Concordia Regional Planner

by Diane McPeak

Urban and regional planner John Udy says the latest M.U.C. Development Plan, the legal basis for all land use planning on the Island of Montréal, is seriously flawed. Faced with a "no-growth" situation, the M.U.C. has nevertheless come up with a plan for projected increased growth. Udy claims this proposal may have the effect of raising Montréal's municipal taxes. "The plan, as is, will not only increase per capita costs, but increased taxes will give Montrealers another reason for leaving the island," predicts the urban planner.

In a brief, presented to the Montréal Urban Community Executive Committee, Udy cites several criticisms of the committee's latest proposals.

Among other things, the plan fails to recognize that more than 1 million people live off the Island. The M.U.C. cannot be planned, in Udy's opinion, without reference to long-established but changing patterns of urban settlement in Québec and Ontario.

"Recommended Métro extensions in the east end are extremely expensive, and are unsuitable for the low population densities to be served. The bottom line is that close to a billion dollars is being spent on the extension of the Métro to areas which are not as densely populated as the downtown core or other outlying regions."

Udy, a recognized North American expert in regional planning, maintains the M.U.C.'s new plan is seriously flawed, not only in terms of what's included, but what's omitted.

"Downtown Montréal is the most complex and interesting part of the entire Community, yet it is shown as a single red blob on the map," points out Udy. There is no explanation for this. "There are vast areas of under-used land zoned for industry. The need for a rationalized industrial pattern — and tax base, has been sidestepped in the plan," Udy says.

Udy states that an effective urban development plan should be prepared based on the Community's ability to pay for new initiatives. "Without an accompanying assessment of cost-benefit and an estimate of the Community's ability to pay, no rational decision, and therefore no planning of the Community's future, can ensue."

Udy thinks that planning and budgeting should be reviewed, discussed, and approved prior to going into effect. If the total bill proves to be too high, then choices will have to be made, with citizens at least having the ability to show their preferences.

Highlights

Some of the M.U.C.'s development plan problems include:

- Industrial land is over-zoned, and areas cited for "priority developments" indiscriminately chosen (e.g., several are under established airplane flight paths, another is in a permanent agricultural zone.);
- designated industrial land is not necessarily tied to definite future industrial needs;
- instead of evaluating items in terms of developing needs and budget constraints, last-minute or unilateral political decisions are made under crisis conditions (e.g., the Olympic Stadium);
- There is no scientific standard for green space needs in the Community. (i.e., one factor which is not taken into account is the amount of open space already existing on the island.); and
- A number of prominent socio-cultural sites are not indicated in the plan including: Concordia University, Université du Québec à Montréal, and St. Joseph's Oratory.

Awards salute outstanding professors

Meet three of the University's brightest lights

by André Fauteux

What's so great about Roland Wills? "How much time have you got?" answered Derrick Ajmo, former president of the Commerce and Administration Students Association (CASA).

Wills, Associate Dean of Academic and Student Affairs in the faculty, won CASA's award for outstanding contribution to student life last year.

"He gives you a chance," Ajmo said of the man who spends a good part of his summers individually counselling about 200 students dipping below the faculty's required GPA — even if he's kicking some of them out.

Besides setting the faculty's admission standards and quotas and overseeing registration, exam schedules and the undergraduate curriculum, Wills has also "done a lot for the survival of CASA," Ajmo said. He tells new presidents what their predecessors accomplished, what their mandate is and how to get what they want.

"And that's only the tip of the iceberg," Ajmo said.

"They're all lies," retorts the friendly, funny man himself. "That's what we're here to do. I'm not the only one," he insists, though admitting other faculties don't offer students special guidance sessions.

Need printed notes!? See Marc Comeau

Not to be outdone is Marc Comeau, who's very, very popular with students who pack his Design I and II Courses. It might have something to do with the rare fact that he gives them printed notes.

A research professor in Electrical and Computer Engineering since early 1986, the 31-year-old Comeau is both a teacher and a friend to students, says Robert Bratulic, former president of Concordia's Computer Society of the Institute for Electrical and Electronics Engineers (IEEE), an international professional organization. He is the recipient of this year's Outstanding Student Branch Councillor's Award for the IEEE.

Comeau's great work with students won him the IEEE Outstanding Branch Councillor-Advisor award for eastern Canada last year. Among his accomplishments: he got the Micromouse project off the ground (a small mouse-robot to be entered in international maze competitions next year), he established the McNaughton Centre that recently opened for IEEE members, and he helped secure funding for last February's Computer Day.

Bratulic has a special reason for liking

Comeau: he told him about an IEEE $3,000 scholarship of which Bratulic was one of only two international winners last year.

As for Comeau, he says he "loves teaching" and "feels great" about the recognition.

De Brentani 'dominant' in marketing

Marketing Professor Ulrike de Brentani, for her part, is dominant in a discipline which traditionally has been a 'men's' field. Eighteen years after she joined the faculty, only one in 10 Commerce and Administration professors are women.

De Brentani is a born winner: she won the Frosst medal as the top Commerce graduate at Sir George Williams University in 1968 and was honoured at the 1983 conference of the Administrative Sciences Association of Canada (ASAC) with an award of excellence for the best doctoral student paper in Marketing. This summer, the ASAC conference was held in Montréal and she won an honourable mention for best paper in Marketing.

"Measuring performance in new industrial services" is an offshoot of the first major study of industrial services companies — 115 of about 185 firms she approached participated in the study, made possible by a three-year grant from the Social Sciences and Humanities Research Council of Canada (SSHRC).

De Brentani's research has had impressive spinoffs for her: an extended version was published in the prestigious Journal of Product Innovation Management that caters to North American academics and business people and she presented it to the Marketing Science Institute, affiliated with the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Enrolment grows by 293 students for year

25,829 now study at Concordia

Bruce Smart, University Registrar, told TTR last week that overall registration for the academic year 1989-1990 increased by 293 students — 1.14%.

Full-time enrolment increased by 469 from 13,007 to 13,476, (+3.6%).

Part-time enrolment decreased by 176 from 12,529 to 12,353 (-1.4%).

The Registrar attributes the slight reduction in part-time students to there being fewer courses available for independent students due to the pressure of full-time enrolments in the Bachelor of Arts program.

Total enrolments at the University are:

- 20,179 undergraduate students;

- 2,569 Master's and Diploma students; and

- 407 Doctoral candidates.

Faculty breakdowns (full- and part-time, undergraduate and graduate) are:

- Arts and Science: 12,382

- Commerce and Administration: 5,999;

- Engineering and Computer Science: 2,531; and

- Fine Arts: 2,237.

Independent students (undergraduate and graduate) total 2,680.

In total for the academic year 1989-1990 there are 25,829 students at Concordia University.

Honorary Degree Nominations

Honorary degree nominations are currently being accepted for the June 1990 convocation ceremonies.

All members of the Concordia community (faculty, students, staff and alumni) are eligible to nominate candidates.* Each submission MUST include a detailed curriculum vitae and a succinct statement explaining why the nominator thinks the candidate is worthy of such an honour. The nomination deadline is November 1st, 1989.

Nomination forms (as well as the criteria and procedures for selecting honorands) are available at the Office of the Secretary-General, Room S-BC-319 (local 4814).

NOTE: Current members of the Faculty, the Administration and the Board of Governors are not eligible to receive honorary degrees.*

AT A GLANCE

New full-time faculty appointments at Concordia

Here is a list by department and sex of the new tenure-stream appointments at Concordia for 1989-90. Last year, the percentage of female professors in tenure-stream appointments was 16%. Statistics Canada reports the national average as 17%. This year, out of 32 positions, 11 women were hired. This represents 35% of the new hires across the University. Last year, women accounted for 25% of new hires. While this increase is to be applauded, departments need to continue their efforts to seek out qualified female applicants. For help and advice on how to widen recruitment, contact Kathleen Perry, Employment Equity Co-ordinator, K-120, 4841.

Beissel takes Todd to task over Layton column

Edited by Bronwyn Chester

Two weeks ago, Montréal poet Irving Layton gave a public reading at Concordia. It launched the 77-year-old poet's year as writer-in-residence at Concordia, his last time teaching. Last Tuesday, Gazette columnist Jack Todd gave his review. After complaining that the auditorium was too hot and the Hall Building smelled "like a wet dog," Todd wrote: "Irving Layton may be a Montreal institution, but his work doesn't stand up to much scrutiny," and "he often seems to write by shaking the dictionary and scooping up whatever falls out." Henry Beissel, co-ordinator of Concordia's Creative Writing program, organized the reading. He and four other professors of English were dismayed by the column and considered writing a letter to The Gazette. Beissel decided not to "flatter" Todd with the attention. Off the cuff, however, he had this to say:

Beissel: "That the man (Todd) is stupid, he can't help. This man wouldn't recognize a poem if it came up to him on Ste. Catherine Street and bit his buttocks. Stupidity is forgivable, malice isn't."

Todd said there were 100 members in the audience. "There were 150 students and anyone in his business should know how to count an audience," says Beissel.

Todd wrote that Professor Wynne Francis' introduction to Layton "drones on almost longer than his performance." Beissel says Francis spoke for five minutes, Layton read for an hour.

"Irving's poetry is not everyone's cup of tea. But whose is?" says Beissel. "He's written some bad poems — we all have — but he's also written some of the finest poems in Canada, such as The Bull Calf."

As for Todd's comment that student's didn't seem too clear on who the poet was, and that a half dozen of them were dozing, Beissel counters: "The young people gave Irving a standing ovation at the end. He had to get them to sit down."

Beissel observes that "journalists very often attack literary people because they themselves are failed writers." Instead of giving a distorted account of the event and

Erratum

It was incorrectly reported in the October 5, 1989, TTR that Concordia University's Board of Governors had approved financing for the outer shell and the contents of the four additional floors that will be built atop the new downtown library building. The figures quoted in the article were taken from a feasibility study outlining a possible scenario of the cost and the method of financing. In actual fact, the governors have not yet authorized any expenditure of funds. The TTR regrets any confusion created by the error.

The art of essay writing

Six Concordia Advanced Composition students win essay writing contest and will be published next fall

by Richard Bird

She plans a career in translation, but recent Concordia graduate Dina Amicone already has a claim to fame: she will be a published writer next fall.

Amicone was one of six Concordia students to win the H.B.J. Holt College Publishers of Canada essay contest held in the spring. The 40 winners selected from 200 entries nation-wide receive a cash award of $50 as well as the honour of being published in an anthology, tentatively titled Contest, to be published in October 1990.

Amicone's essay, In Defense of the Secretary, was written as a response to a column in La Presse by Francine Montpetit in which the columnist claimed that computers would liberate secretaries from the domination of their bosses.

"The problem is really the condescending attitude," says Amicone. "It is not the computer or the lack of the computer, it's really the attitude towards the secretaries. The 'Oh well, she's just a secretary' sort of thing."

'Attack specific issues'

"A good paper is a paper that attacks a specific issue like this right away," says Amicone's professor from her Advanced Composition course, David Tacium. "Not all the papers that came out of the class had the same urgency."

All six winners are Advanced Composition students within the English department. It is interesting to note that the course is taught solely by part-time professors.

"As professors we often don't take the writing that we see seriously enough as having professional potential," says Tacium. "I think there are probably a lot of classes in which the professors simply pay no attention to this kind of contest and I think that's wrong."

The other winning essays from Concordia were: A Touch From the East, by Daggy Brunst, Joyful William, by Kathleen Darlington, The Skier, by Nancy Dorey, Afternoon of Blood and Honor, by Silvia Teja-Gonzales, all students of Mary Hagey, and Illiterate Like Me, by Dan Zollman, a student of Ritva Seppanen.

Why so many Concordia winners? "Students here are producing their own literature; that's what the Composition course here is all about," says Tacium. He asserts that the course stresses writing rather than the theory of literature.

The Contest anthology will be available as a class text, an idea that both Tacium and Amicone think is a viable alternative to the classics.

"When you show them something that was written by Ernest Hemingway, they say 'But that's a writer and I'm not,'" says Tacium.

"But if you see other students' essays," explains Amicone, "you can say 'Well, maybe with rewriting and more rewriting I can do that.'"

Advanced Composition professor David Tacium and award-winning student Dina Amicone. Amicone asserts that seeing other students' works in print will lead aspiring writers to say "I can do that."

The Concordia Stingers football team hosts Carleton this Saturday in their final league game. They will enter the playoffs the following week for the first time in four years. The Stingers have struggled offensively in recent weeks but have looked very good on the defensive side of the ball. The defensive backfield has been outstanding despite having four first-year starters. Stéphane Leclerc (Leisure Studies), Sean Keating (Leisure Studies), Scott Hitchcock (Exercise Science), and Ian Ployart (Arts & Science) have adapted well in their first year under the gun. They have been aided by cagey four-year veterans Stéphane Chapados (Political Science) and Alvaro Martinez (Arts & Science). Martinez has had a banner season with 62 tackles in six games, good for second place in the league. Team captain Chapados has been a leader on and off the field this year. He needs one interception to become the all-time Concordia interception leader.

The new Concordia stadium has played host to several large crowds this season. It appears that the football team has laid the base for a successful year by all the Stinger teams in 1989-90.

Both basketball teams open their exhibition seasons Friday as they play their respective alumni games. The men's team hosts the Nike Centennial Tournament on November 3 and 4. National contenders UPEI and UBC join the Stingers and Bishop's as participants. The women host their annual tournament from November 17 to 19. Look for the men's team to be 'Turbo'-charged this season. One of the top players in the Montréal area has joined the Stingers. Trevor 'Turbo' Williams has transferred to Concordia from the NCAA and should provide the team with plenty of slam dunks and an improved fast break. Williams combines with returning veterans Michael Cohee, Nick Arvanitis and Dino Perin to give the Stingers one of the top starting units in the country.

The men's hockey team opens their regular season on October 27 against Queen's. They have been playing exhibition games since early October and look very impressive in the early going. The Stingers have scheduled six games against tough NCAA competition this year. Concordia has applied to join Hockey East next year and this would certainly put Concordia Hockey on Prime Time. The Montréal Canadiens are backing the Stingers' bid to join the NCAA. As for the team, they will be led by Guy Lafleur Trophy winner Richard Laplante (Business III). The two-time OUAA All-Star has finished among the top three league-leading scorers since joining the Stingers. Laplante and the Stingers entertain the Providence College Friars on Friday (Oct. 20) at 7:30 p.m. and on Saturday at 2:30 p.m. The Friars are one of the top teams in the NCAA and will give hockey fans a taste of the best in collegiate hockey.

Several Concordia athletes won academic scholarships last week courtesy of the Québec Foundation for Student Athletes. Leading the way was soccer star Annie Caron (Graphic Arts I) who plays for the national team as well as the Stingers. She was joined by skier Rosanne Gamache (Business II) and basketball recruit Robert Ferguson (Arts & Science) who were also winners.

'I'll never stop studying': Prendergast

Our Associate Director of Admissions wins Royal Bank Medal for MBA studies, and plans to continue learning and teaching forever

by Zonia Keywan

Few people would think of doing an MBA just for pleasure. But Lyne Prendergast, Associate Director of Admissions, did just that. And she did it so well that when she graduated last spring she was chosen a co-winner of the Royal Bank of Canada Medal, which is given to the best overall student in the Concordia MBA program. The other winner of the award, which consists of a $500 cash prize and a medal, was Barbara Jo de Beaupré.

Prendergast, who has been working at Sir George and Concordia, mainly in Admissions, for the last 25 years, says she enrolled in the MBA program six years ago because "studying has been a hobby for me." She had already completed a BSc in Science and an Honours BA in English Literature, taking the programs on a part-time basis.

As if that hasn't been enough to keep her busy, she has been involved as a CUNASA representative on the Job Evaluation Task Force and Project.

About her current studies she says, "I debated whether to do a Master's in English, then I decided that an MBA would give me exposure to a third type of discipline, after the sciences and the humanities."

Prendergast's dedication to university studies is "an example of how people can change over the years," she remarks. When she completed high school, she passed up a chance to go to university and chose instead to enroll in a secretarial college. But once she started on her first degree, she never looked back.

As with the programs she completed earlier, Prendergast took her MBA courses at the rate of one or two per term. She found the experience "enjoyable and challenging. I liked the fact that creativity and initiative were required."

How did she handle the pressure of constant reading and assignments? She admits that it helps to be disciplined and organized. But, she adds, "it's like a hobby. You put in a lot of time and you don't mind. I didn't view it as work. It wasn't a struggle to always do something."

Although her decision to do an MBA was not directly linked to her job, Prendergast says that what she learned has helped her in her role as a manager.

"As I was going through the program, I tried the different techniques. I was using the tools on the job long before I got the degree," she says.

Prendergast's current project is "to give the other side of the room a try." She is teaching an undergraduate course in Decision Science in the Faculty of Commerce and Administration.

"It's a new experience, a change," she says. "And it's actually more work than taking a course. You have to keep up all the time."

"But I'm thoroughly enjoying it," she adds. "I intend never to leave some aspect of education, either as a student or a teacher."

Prime Time To Open Your Mind

Best and brightest high school students visiting Concordia for Science Exploration Week

by Laurie Zack

October 14 to 22 is the fourth biennial National Universities Week, sponsored by the Association of Universities and Colleges of Canada. This year, the week is targeted to a specific audience: the future generation of university students. Under the banner Prime Time to Open Your Mind, Québec universities have distributed posters and leaflets to some 900 high schools and CEGEPS across the province.

Concordia's Liaison Office, too, has extended a special invitation to local high school students. In collaboration with the Directors of the Lakeshore, Baldwin Cartier, South Shore Protestant, Montréal Catholic, Greater Montréal Protestant and Sault St-Louis School Boards, 50 of the region's best and brightest high school students are participating in "Science Exploration Week" this week at Concordia.

The idea of the project is to expose these academically gifted students to the various facets of natural, pure and applied sciences at University through lecture series and hands-on lab work. The brisk week of activities, as guests of the University, has been designed to give the students both a taste of what Concordia has to offer and a perspective on the future of science.

A whirlwind week

On Monday, new Vice Rector Academic Rose Sheinin spoke to the students about the future of science and research. The talk was followed by a geology field trip to Mount Royal. Tuesday's schedule was highlighted by a research discussion of robotic systems, computer chip design and optical fiber research with Dr. Otto Schwelb of Electrical and Computer Engineering. The students then toured the Biology research labs and met with graduate students and professors.

The week continued with a Psychology lecture, Exercise Science lecture, Exercise Tolerance lab test and Chemistry lab experiment on Wednesday.

Thursday's visit included a discussion of lasers and radon detection in applied Physics, a visit to flight and car simulators in Mechanical Engineering and a visit to Building Engineering. The week will wind up on Friday with a talk on Civil Engineering and a visit and discussion with students at the Science College. The students are being awarded special certificates to mark their participation.

Work at the national level of NUW has also resulted in a number of other initiatives including a special Oct. 16 full-colour, eight-page supplement on universities in Maclean's and L'Actualité, as well as radio and TV service announcements and a national speakers bureau involving university presidents. At the opening ceremony of NUW in Ottawa on October 11, 2,500 Canada Scholarships were presented to high school graduates continuing their studies in science and technology. Half were awarded to women.

Inter-campus bus service studied

by Silvia Cademartori

The Office of the Vice-Rector, Services has conducted a two-week-long study, completed last Monday, into the shuttle bus situation as a result of student complaints about service being too scanty.

The study was carried out by the shuttle bus drivers, starting on September 26.

The Office will base its decision about adding an extra bus on the findings of the study, said Shirley Maynes, assistant to Vice-Rector, Services, Charles Giguère.

"The study consists of surveys taken by the bus drivers indicating how many people were on the bus at the time of departure, but more critically how many people were left at the bus stop," said Maynes.

She added that "If there is a trend where there's a busy period when the shuttle bus is constantly leaving people behind, then obviously there is a critical need for another bus."

The Office is to study the results of the survey with Physical Plant, which manages the shuttle buses, and decide what route to take. Operations Manager at the Loyola campus, Bill Gerecum, is hoping the study will show a pattern of the busiest times for the buses. If so, an extra bus might be added during the rush period, he told TTR.

Presently there are three shuttle buses in use, all of them rented by the University from Transco at a total cost of $ 317,000 per year, according to the Director of Physical Resources, Frank Papineau. Two of the buses are rented exclusively by the University at a cost of $ 282,000 and service both campuses every 20 minutes from 8 a.m. to 11 p.m. The third bus runs during the peak hours from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. at a yearly cost of $35,000.

The Office of the Vice-Rector, Services is prepared to spend more money for another bus as long as there is a proven need for one, said Maynes. Papineau said a fourth bus would cost the University an extra $265 a day.

The long lineups for the shuttle buses are a re-occurring problem according to Maynes. "It's always a problem that surfaces in September and settles in October. This year it's been pointed out to us that students might be saying 'to heck with the shuttle bus, I'm going to jump on the Metro,'" said Maynes.

"If the problem is straightening out because people are saying the service isn't good, then we'll fix it."

Concluded Maynes: "Concordia is a two-campus University and we intend to provide the transportation needs between the two campuses."

They can make your average anything but.

Smith Corona presents three products that can help make schoolwork academic.

The Smith Corona PWP 2000 Personal Word Processor is in a class by itself. It's so compact it can fit in the most compact dorm room. Yet, thanks to features like a built-in disk drive, 100,000 character DataDisk capacity, and a crystal clear display, it makes it easy to transform B's into A's.

For those who prefer an electronic typewriter, the Smith Corona XD 4600 is the typewriter of preference. With its 16 character display and approximately 7,000 characters of editable memory, you can have the convenience of word processing features with the simplicity of a typewriter.

Of course, the Spell-Right™ 200 also comes with impeccable references. In this case, a built-in electronic dictionary, a thesaurus, a calculator, even a collection of challenging word games.

So if you're thinking Magna Cum Laude at the end of this year, don't forget to think Smith Corona at the beginning of this year.

For more information on these products, write to Smith Corona Canada, 440 Tapscott Road, Scarborough, Ontario, Canada M1B 1Y4.
